(c) what is the tenure of a SHO and other cops in one police stations; and

(d) the steps taken to keep on rotating the cops after two years?

THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE MINISTRY OF HOME AFFAIRS: (SHRI P.M. SAYEED): (a) The requisite information is given in the enclosed statement (see below).

(b) to (d) The tenure of an Inspector of Delhi Police on the post of SHO of a Police Station is generally three years. Exceptions are, however, made depending on the competence and experience of individual officers and the requirement of particular assignments.

The Delhi Police endeavours to rotate its officers in a manner that enables each of them to get an exposure to the various branches of police working. Inspectors of Delhi Police are also rotated between the posts of Station House Officer, investigative jobs and desk jobs, so that the opportunities for field experience as far as possible are equitable/made available to the maximum number of officers.
